John was born in Boston, Massachusetts on June 24th, 1943. After graduating from high school, John joined the Air Force and was stationed in Savannah and Charleston. He was an Air Force engineer and it was there that his love of mechanical repair and engineering grew. After the Air Force, he worked as a computer engineer for IBM for 30 years and eventually retired to enjoy island life on St. George Island.

John has been a beloved member of the community on St. George Island since moving there in 2010. Everyone came to know he could fix, repair, build, design and create anything. As an artisan woodworker, he spent countless hours in his shop designing and building beautiful pieces for friends, family and local businesses. He volunteered his time at St. George Island State Park and was always eager to help anyone who needed it. He cherished his role in the community as he was always happiest when he was helping other people.

A memorial celebration will be held at a later date. Memorial Donations may be made to Friends of Franklin County State Park, United Methodist Church on St. George Island or the Franklin County Humane Society.
