“ I remember days of playing, carefree, in the safety of a small community where "Uncle Charles and Aunt Pete" were the reigning Monarch and Patriarch of the "middle street" That meant Sweet Tea at Sunset, and stern words for raising too much of a ruckus, and sometimes, on VERY special occasions, sitting across the table from Uncle Charles, soaking up wisdom and humor in the sweetest fashion, always with a Bible, dog-eared and floppy, on the table between us. What a precious man. And what a precious family he raised. I'm so honored to be made to feel that i'm a part of it.
