“ Dan was my only brother... Younger than me by a year and a half or so. I don't know, with all those memories, what I can put down here for others to read. I remember playing together when we were kids, when times were good... And crying together, when times were not.

Dan was so much more than a woodworker in the construction industry. He was extremely talented with his hands, and being able to work on, or fix, anything. He built an entire woodshop building by himself at one point. he fixed car engines, small engines, anything else that needed repairs. He was quiet, funny, and very shy. I still catch myself thinking that I need to call and catch up with him and tell him something of interest.
