“ Mr. Revell was my supervisor's boss, and when I did not do as well in my first six months with Disability Determinations, and my supervisor "wrote me up", Mr. Revell allowed me to take a demotion and continue on "probation" for another six months, SAVING my "Career Service" commitment. He was a true gentleman about it; he understood from the Quality Assurance staff that I did good work but needed to speed up. That was accomplished in the next three months, and Mr. Revell never made it seem that HE was my saving grace; but he had been. That understanding a patience was part of his Leadership. God speed, Sir.

“ He looked pretty much the same when he was younger. He was my operations supervisor when I was a unit supervisor with DDS. He was a very good, athletic man and a great supervisor - to his memory and to his presence as they say in the Far East.
