I met Ginger shortly after we moved to Carrabelle, 24 years ago. The first story I wrote for the Carrabelle Times was about the election of her Mom, Jenny Sanborn, as Mayor. I was new in town, and it was hard for me to make friends, but Ginger walked up to me one day and hugged me and told me how much she liked my story about her mother. We spoke often after that, as she apparently followed my stories about local news; we always had SOMEONE to dish about! I loved her outright opinions, her diligent faith, and she bragged SO about her children. We are poorer without her.

“ My mom Ann Pille loved it when she cleaned for her a few years ago. She was always doing something special for her around the holidays. Such a sweet person. I miss her. May she rest in God's loving arms!
