I have known Greg since 1968, 57 years. We stayed in touch every year by letters, phone calls and lived together four times. I worked for his business in sales and production. I loved him dearly. I have so many memories and stories, but for now I have a big hole in my heart that Greg filled. He's still there but I miss our weekly calls that gave me happiness and grounded me. Like I told Andres I guess I have to grow up now at 73 and be a big girl. I miss him so. Here if anyone wants to reach out and share Greg tales. I know he was loved by many. Much sincerely Debora Dahl. Andres knows how to find me. ❤️❤️

“ Sitting in the leather shop with Greg while he taught me how to make leather products. As we sat together, he shared his life's experiences and stories with me. Even talking over his unpopular beliefs and ideas. He would remind me that perfection is unattainable but the best you can do is try your best and fix the mistakes you can.
