PS

“ John Taylor! Guitar player extraordinaire! When I stepped off the train in Marseille France, there stood Elder Taylor waiting for me with a sandwich. His black jeans instead of dress slacks. White shirt. Black tie. He looked at me with a kind of snarl.... “I hear you play guitar.” He said. Instead of heading to the apartment, we headed to the guitar shop so that I could show him my guitar playing. He was inspired! He bought an electric guitar and a tiny battery powered amp. We walked to the US embassy in Marseille and he played The Star Spangled Banner on his new guitar! He was a character! He made raquette, spoke good French, and knew how to have fun. After France he drove his Mustang through Colorado on his way to Utah. I was still in France but he stayed with my family. He met my parents and my little brother. I spoke with him once when I returned home From France. I tracked him down in Florida. I have never spoken with him again not for lack of trying. I have searched the internet far and wide looking for my friend. Tonight out of the blue I decided to google once again..... John Taylor Tallahassee. I’m so sad to find his obituary. And to discover that today is his birthday. May all who knew John remember him like I did 30 years ago in France! Rest In Peace my friend.

“ John was such an old soul...i will miss his smile and his infectious laugh most of all. He brought a sense of calm to an otherwise chaotic time and place. Who is going to correct me on my crossword puzzles now? Who else is going to agree with me on the top 5 bands of all time?! Who is gonna fill those big black work boots? My little world is not the same without him. We miss you John. My deepest condolences to the family and "other" friends of John...

“ John was a truly kind and gentle soul. I worked with John at TMH in recovery on 2B south and I know he has made a positive impression on every employee and patient that has crossed his path. My deepest sympathies go out to the family.
