“ Yesterday the world lost an incredible man, friend, husband, father, and servant of God. I can't remember when we met. He just seemed to always be in my life, cheering me up with just a chuckle and a smirk. He'd show up & burst into the "Man Shed" with a hefty HELLO!!! College football will never be the same, every fall Saturday was ours. I won't be able to eat Parmesan chicken wings without comparing them to his recipe, which will never be beat!

I believe it was on the very day I took this pic, we got tired of catching red snapper trying to get to grouper. A lone dolphin showed up and anticipated each snapper we'd throw back. The water was so clear you could see our new friend dive down and, more times than not, return to the surface snapper in mouth! He'd move off to enjoy his snack and come back to await our next snapper. This went on for for what seemed an hour or more. In fact, our friend was still with us after we pulled anchor. Stuff like that happened all the time around Rob. Whether it was a dolphin encounter, FSU's "Onion" kicking the game-winning field goal against Clemson, or watching Winston lead our team to a last second national championship, it was like the universe knew he was there and something amazing would happen! Makes me come to the conclusion of how special he was, God just knew Rob was special and amazing.

Tho my heart aches, I know God called him back to serve him and I have to accept this. I also know Rob's spirit is too strong to fade and we'll meet again. I love you Rob.
